One question that I have about the material is I don't understand the cin function very well. I can use the function, but I would like to be able to understand why we put it in the place that we do. For example, in python when I make inputs, I assign it to a variable before ever using it, but in C++, I assign the variable within a sentence which confuses me a bit.